BEST PRACTICES

Grey Wolf Engineers takes advantage of lifetimes of experience, knowledge and success to be the best we can for our clients.

THE GREY WOLF WAY, WIN-WIN

Designing and permitting thousands of projects in the region, we have developed the Grey Wolf Way of approach to permitting with a win-win mindset. We leverage extensive experience, proprietary information systems and longstanding relationships to achieve rapid approval of our clients' projects.

As a 6th generation civil engineer and surveyor, Jason started in the civil engineering and surveying business in 1983 as the bag man (er, boy) on a surveying crew at his family's firm. Growing up in the business has provided lifetimes of knowledge on civil engineering and surveying successes and failures.

“Having been blessed to serve in leadership with 4 of the top civil engineering firms in Texas during my career, I built Grey Wolf Engineers on the best practices from all 4, making us better for our clients.”

THE WOLVES OF TEXAS HISTORY

From hurricanes to pandemics, The Spirit of Texas has long been one of tenacity and strength. Situations don't determine our fate; our attitudes and action do.

"Six generations ago in the 1840s, my great, great, great, grandfather came to Texas as a soldier in the US Army and soon began surveying land grants for the heroes of Texas' protection and independence. His journals include stories of packs of the Texas Grey Wolf, throughout South Texas. Classified as extinct in the 1960s, the Texas Grey Wolf is being spotted once again in the Texas wilderness, as a demonstration of the indomitable Spirit of Texas."

GIVING BACK

"If all Grey Wolf does is engineer and survey, we will have failed as a company"
